

Head Teacher's Message

In yesterday's assembly, we were lucky enough to have Nick Carter as our inspirational guest speaker. Nick told us about how he had set himself goals in life that at first seemed impossible to achieve – one example was climbing Mount Everest. He explained how he had listed the things that he would have to be to make this dream come true – he would have to be braver, tougher, better at working as part of a team. For each of these areas he set up challenges which he would need to overcome to enable him to be braver, tougher or a better team-player. Each of these challenges enabled him to be more prepared, so that he was eventually able to climb the highest mountain in the world.

The key message that we took from this is that if we set ourselves goals, even if these seem impossible at first, these can be turned into reality. Breaking down a huge task into smaller parts can make it seem less scary and more manageable. Tackling something once is daunting but makes it easier to face in the future.

Our children are capable of anything. If they stay committed to their dreams and work towards them in small stages these will be fulfilled.

Our job at Godwin is to work with you to give our children the self-belief to know that this is true.

Best wishes for a restful break.
